MANAC1 - GROUP NUMBER 10 (GAYATRI BIOORGANICS LTD)
ASSIGNMENT NUMBER 1

3) Respond to any one question from the case studies mentioned

Case Study 2 (Amar Akbar)

C – The other factors when deciding upon the type of entity are:-

1. Legal Liability – It is important to determine to what extent the owner wants to be shielded from legal liability and if the risks associated with the liability can be afforded.
2. Tax Structure – The owners have to see the tax structures associated with the entity and the opportunities to minimize taxation.
3. Costs and Capital requirements – The ability to raise capital and the costs associated need to be looked at.
4. Flexibility – The ownership structure should have maximum flexibility to accommodate the needs of the business as well as the personal needs of the owners.

Case Study 4 (Koya Kabs)

A - In the calculation of loss, Koya has deducted the down payment of Rs.2, 85,000 from his savings of Rs. 7,490. This method is incorrect because:

- The down payment should not be a part of the loss calculations.
- The amount spent on household expenditures should be a part of the profit.
- Depreciation of car should be deducted from revenue to arrive at profit.
- Operating expenditures will include diesel and oil expense, uniform and badge expense and food and drinks while driving expense.
- Only the interest portion of the EMI should be deducted from revenue.

Case Study 4 (Lehmann Bros)

A – Firms should create their own subsidiaries especially in foreign countries for these reasons:-

1. International Presence - It gives them international presence and brand recognition, thus expanding the company's reach.
2. Taxation - It helps them save on taxes and receive favourable tax treatment from the foreign country.
3. Legal Liability - It helps them limit their liability as the parent company and subsidiaries will be separate legal entities.
4. Lower costs - Having subsidiaries in countries where cost of labour and production are low enables the company to operate at lower costs.
